Dear Dean of Students:

Attached is a letter that was sent to the Editor(s) in Chief of your school’s law reviews and journals announcing the Tenth Annual LexisNexis® James William Moore Federal Practice Award, to be given out in October 2009.

We wanted to make sure you were aware of our invitation to your school’s law review(s) to participate in the selection of papers to be submitted to LexisNexis Matthew Bender. As indicated in the attached letter, we intend to encourage and recognize outstanding scholarship on federal civil practice and procedure. The deadline for submission of articles to be considered for the Award is June 1, 2009.

Please share the attached announcement with any faculty members teaching civil procedure, federal courts, conflicts of laws, or any other appropriate topics in your school.

I am also enclosing a small poster announcing the competition in case your school has any appropriate bulletin boards or other locations for placing such announcements.

If you have any questions, please call me at 800-424-0651, x3300.

Dear Editor in Chief:

LexisNexis® is pleased to announce the Tenth Annual James William Moore Federal Practice Award. Named after the esteemed original author of the leading treatise on federal civil practice and procedure, Moore's Federal Practice®, the award is intended to encourage and recognize outstanding scholarship in this complex and evolving area of the law. This year’s prizes will be awarded in Fall 2009.

We are inviting you to participate in the selection of papers to be submitted for consideration. One paper will be selected as the winner of the Award. The winning author will receive:

- a cash prize of $2,000;
- a full set of Moore's Federal Rules Pamphlets; and
- publicity of his or her name in connection with this award.

In addition to the award given to the author, the law review or journal that submits the winning article will be awarded $1000 in appreciation of the efforts involved.

Please see the attachment for details regarding the requirements for submitted articles.

The respected Board of Editors for Moore's Federal Practice will select the winning papers based on the judging standards set forth below:

Professor Daniel R. Coquillette
Boston College Law School
Newton, Massachusetts

Professor Georgene M. Vairo
Loyola Law School
Los Angeles, California

Gregory P. Joseph, Esq.
Gregory P. Joseph Law Offices LLC
New York, New York

Sol Schreiber, Esq.
Of Counsel, Milberg LLP
New York, New York

Jerold S. Solovy, Esq.
Chairman Emeritus, Jenner & Block LLP
Chicago, Illinois

Please note that the deadline for submission of articles to be considered for this year’s Award is June 1, 2009. Winners will be announced on or around October 1, 2009. You may direct any inquiries to me, at 800-424-0651, ext. 3300.

Best regards,

Eligibility requirements:

Only students enrolled in law school through the end of the current (2008-2009) school year will be eligible to participate.

Entrants' papers must have been either submitted for publication in a student publication or prepared as course work in connection with a course at law school. Entrants' papers need not have been actually published.

Papers that have been submitted to professional or for-profit publications will be ineligible.

All papers must be the original work of an individual student, although normal comment and guidance by law school faculty and journal editors is permitted. Joint papers are not eligible for the award.

The principal subject of the submitted paper must be federal civil practice and procedure, including the civil jurisdiction and venue rules of the federal courts. Submissions on the topics of federal courts management, federal appellate procedure, and alternative dispute resolution will also be acceptable. However, papers that deal primarily with criminal procedure will not be acceptable.

Papers focusing on the procedural aspects of certain types of substantive federal litigation are acceptable. For example, LexisNexis will accept an article on the scope of permissible discovery in an employment discrimination case, so long as the article focuses on interpretation of the applicable procedural rules. Papers on purely substantive issues that may arise in federal litigation (e.g., the scope of a particular defense to an antitrust action) are not eligible.

By submitting a paper for the James William Moore Federal Practice Award, the entrant and the law review grants to LexisNexis, a division of Reed Elsevier Inc., and its parents and its and their affiliates and subsidiaries (collectively "LexisNexis") the right to hyperlink from a LexisNexis web site page to the paper.

By submitting a paper to LexisNexis pursuant to this James William Moore Federal Practice Award the entrant and law review or journal hereby expressly consents to the terms and conditions contained herein.

Entry procedure:

The Editors in Chief of each law review or journal at the school will determine the procedures by which papers are to be chosen by the law review for submission to LexisNexis. LexisNexis will only accept submissions from the Editors in Chief of the law school's law reviews or journals.

Each law review may submit up to three (3) papers for consideration. Papers, along with fall 2009 contact information (address, phone number, and email address) for the author and the law review (including name of the incoming editor-in-chief) should be submitted to:

Procedures and Requirements for the LexisNexis®
James William Moore Federal Practice Award
Tenth Annual Award (2009)

In order to be considered for this year’s Award, articles must be postmarked no later than June 1, 2009. The winner will be selected on or around October 1, 2009.

Format requirements:

All papers should follow the citation form set out in the Eighteenth Edition of A Uniform System of Citation ("The Harvard Bluebook"). Papers should be double-spaced (footnotes single-spaced), presented on one side of 8 1/2 x 11-inch paper. Times New Roman, 12 point, is the preferred font for both footnotes and text.

Submitted papers should be a minimum of 20 pages when formatted as indicated above.

One electronic copy and six paper copies of each paper should be submitted. Electronic copies should be submitted on a CD-ROM.

Judging standards:

Factors considered in the judging of papers will include:
- Quality of writing, including style and organization
- Thoroughness of research
- Persuasiveness of the argument made in support of the author’s hypothesis
- The extent to which the article will assist the legal community in understanding a difficult issue of federal practice and procedure
- The significance to federal litigators of the issues addressed

The decision of the judges will be final and binding.

Winner:

One entrant submitting a paper will be selected based upon the Judging standards set forth above by the Board of Editors for Moore’s Federal Practice on or about October 1, 2009. The name of the entrant winner will be announced within 30 days after the selection date, provided however that the selected individual meets all qualifications and eligibility criteria.

Except where prohibited by law, entry and/or acceptance of the award by the winner constitutes permission for LexisNexis to use, without further compensation, worldwide, for advertising/publicity purposes worldwide and in any and all forms of media, now known and hereafter devised, including without limitation online, entrant winner’s name, address (city and state), photo, likeness, voice, biographical information, and statements.

Prize:

The entrant whose paper is selected will receive (a) a cash prize of $2,000 and (b) a four-volume set of Moore’s Federal Rules Pamphlets (total approx. retail value: $300). In addition the law review or journal that submits the winning article will receive $1,000. If applicable, all Federal, state and local taxes, and all income and any other taxes, fees and surcharges will be the sole responsibility of the entrant winner and law review.
